SEITZ, ANTON

Munich

"Agreeable to promise, we issue with our current number a picture serving as an illustration to our articles on artistic photography, and which, we believe, will be received with great interest and unusual pleasure by our readers. It is called The Village Photographer, and was copied from an oil painting by Mr. Anton Seitz, of Munich, who is called the "Messonnier of Germany." Mr. Seitz chose this subject, and painted it for the Paris Exhibition of 1868, where it was exhibited, and caused the artist to be awarded a medal for its excellence. It was then photographed, and a print sent to Charles L. Sharpless, Esq., one of the best known merchants of Philadelphia, who at once purchased the picture, and very kindly loaned it to us to make the negatives used by us for our present illustration.—From The Philadelphia Photographer, October, 1879
